SIMMONS' LIVER Regulator.
THE symptoms of Liver Complaint are weakness, and pain in the side. Sometimes the pain is in the shoulder, and is mistaken for rheumatism. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness, and in general costiveness. Sometimes alternating with acid. The head is troubled with pain, and dull, heavy sensation, considerable loss of memory, accompanied with painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. Often complaining of weakness, debility, and low spirits. Sometimes many of the above symptoms attend the disease, and at other times very few of them; but the liver is generally the organ most involved. Cure the liver with INDEPENDENT.

REPLY TO THE INFIDEL ATTACK OF THE INDEPENDENT ON CHRISTIANITY.

But how is it with infidelity? The dissenting crowds of deists, neologists, materialists and open atheists, show their diversity to be greater than is found among any other class of men. Not two infidels ever taught alike notwithstanding their common opposition to the Bible. Their reasoning faculties are even worse than others, being cut loose from conscience. These disagreements and acknowledgments of the short comings of all human sciences of scientific men proves an incapability and defect in the moral and intellectual constitution of man to investigate and comprehend rightly and fully even the mysteries and phenomena of nature which we see. If we cannot understand right what we see how could we dissolve the great mysteries with which human life is so intimately connected and concerned, and from which results weal or woe. This insufficiency of human knowledge proves a revelation necessary and desirable. This leads us to the second point in which we prove from the testimonies of great scientific men an acknowledgment of such necessity and desirability of a revelation from God to man. We begin with Socrates, one of the ancient philosophers. He says: Socrates page 21. "I doubt not God will at his own time, send down to men, taught by himself, who will disclose to them the most important of all mysteries, namely: How can our sins be forgiven." Alcibiades I who wrote in the spirit of Plato, also an ancient philosopher of Greece says: "We will wait for one, he it a God or a divinely inspired man, who gives us information of our duties, and as Athens by Homer speaks to Demetrius, that takes away the darkness from our eyes."

Plato a renowned Grecian philosopher, and the teacher of Aristotle says in Phaedon: "On mere fragments of truth we are compelled to ship the stormy sea of life, if there is no safe way, a revelation, that is to be our vessel, fears no storms."

Goethe the great German poet was a man of much learning. He lived in the time of German rationalism, from which his life and energies were poured. But on his death bed when the realities of eternity were upon him he despaired of all his learning and cried out for more light.

Schiller also a great German poet writes from Weimar on the 7th day of January 1788 to Körner: "If I do not otherwise hope with my existence hope that is nearly extinguished in me then I am ruined, a philosophical hypochondriac consumes my soul, all her blossoms are threatened to fall off."

We conclude these testimonies on the necessity and desirability with a testimony from Haller, generally called the father of recent anatomy and physiology, certainly known to all studying physicians. He writes on the 28th of Nov. 1771. "Who are the infidels the mockers? The last named know not the principles of faith. Self conceit precipitation and the prejudiced laughter of pleasant writers tearing them along, because they would regret every hour time in which they were compelled to hear the earnest voice of truth. The infidels who are standing foremost in the fight and contest against revelation, the very heroes among them, have never possessed the knowledge of languages of antiquities and of history, that are necessary to weigh the principles and foundations of faith. I have read the most renowned among them, but none was able himself to comprehend even the external significations of the words of scripture. None of them know enough of nature that he could himself discover the foot prints of divinity, which shine so often and brilliantly in the purposes and order of created beings. Where a Hobbes doubted, there a Newton believed; where an O'Brien mocked there prayed and praised a Goethe. John Bernoulli the joint inventor of the most difficult calculations, the great mathematician regretted in his old age that he spent so many years in scientific investigations and so few hours about religion. He admonished his last hearer to hold him self to the word of God, which alone was the word of life."

But we prove the necessity and desirability of a divine revelation also thirdly by the darkness and uncertainty itself in regard to the most important questions of life.

1. Without revelation we can come to no certain knowledge of God. All that we know by conscience and nature is that a Supreme Being exists. We are even compelled to ascribe to him wisdom on account of his wise designs, also almighty power on account of the greatness of his works. So our conscience too proves him to be holy and righteous. And if we take in consideration his kind provision for man and all other living creatures, we conclude him to be love kind and merciful. Further then this we cannot penetrate. He appears to us like a magnificent palace in the distance. We know nothing about the inside departments, nothing of his supreme mind or will; nothing of his real nature divine perfection and attributes. Our finite nature cannot comprehend his infinite nature. He is too high for us, and like the sun is too dazzling and bright for our eyes, so his majesty is too great for our comprehension. And yet we are consciences feel certain obligations and duties to him. We are bound to love him and fear him above everything else but how can we do this if we would be left in ignorance of his majesty and attributes? Can we worship him whom we know not? And who should give the desired information but him alone, who knows himself as a perfect being his perfections will and thoughts. This proves that God himself must originate and convey to man his will by revelation and that such revelation is necessary.

3. Without revelation we know nothing definite by which means we can worship him acceptably. Reason cannot teach us what rites should be observed, for it knows not whether they are according to his will and therefore unacceptable. Human inventions will be marked by human weakness, as heathenism shows where idolatry was the result. Such acceptable worship God alone knows, and he too must make their appointment, and hence the need of special communications and Revelations from him.

3. Without revelation we know nothing about our origin and the creation of the world, and are utterly unable to account for the circumstances by which we are surrounded. We find ourselves on the earth and feel that we are borne along the stream of time with the rest of our generation towards a dark gulf before us, which we feel we can by no means escape. But when we inquire respecting the origin of our race or seek a solution of the enigma of our sufferings and mortal existence, we find no one among the living or the dead, from whom we can obtain the least satisfactory information. We would appeal in vain to the human sciences to lift the veil from these existing mysteries, for they can furnish no data on these subjects. If there was no Bible or revelation we would remain in darkness thereon forever, and be plagued all our lives with mere guess work.

4. Without revelation we would know nothing about the origin and mystery of sin. The real existence of sin and evil is felt so severely in our own hearts and lives and it crosses our path and intercourse with others at every step we take. It is the cause of anxiety in us and in others. On its account, human governments, with punishing, judging authority and powers are necessary to keep elements of human society from rushing into a general war and temporal ruin. By it our consciences are annoyed, and we step with fearful expectations of future punishments toward our grave, knowing there is something fearful behind the veil. Yet where did this moral evil come from? Why does it fill our life with wretchedness, and make our prospect for the future gloomy? Can human reason and wisdom dissolve the riddle of this mystery? No! no! Darkness covereth the whole earth herein, and we are left without a glimpse of information on the important subject. Is not a divine revelation here necessary?

5. Without a revelation we know nothing about a forgiveness of sin, or a redemption of our soul from sin and its attending horrors. And yet on this all important question hangs weal or woe. How can a man hope without divine interposition and interference, to get rid of sin and the grasp of conscience as the divine moral law? How can he be able to stand before the moral governor and judge of all the world, whose great judgments are already foreshadowed in the compunctions of conscience? Suppose God would try to be virtuous in order to obtain peace? But can a thorn bush bring grapes or figs? If not, then a sinner poisoned in his nature with that moral disease cannot of himself be good and virtuous. Or if one would suppose his good deeds done would counterbalance his evil deeds and so he will be happy for relief? But can we have power over one single sin after it is committed? If not how can we think our good works take the bad away? And why not? Because God and our conscience are the only judges. Perhaps you think by trusting his mercy you would get rid of his judgment. But does not your conscience tell you that God is holy and righteous? If so how can he be in opposition to himself? Can his mercy violate the attributes of holiness and righteousness, which he forbids his creatures to violate? He cannot do what he forbids us to do, without contradicting his own claims and become himself wicked. Therefore as we stand convicted and condemned before him and his law, he must himself devise a way of salvation for us, in which his mercy satisfies his holiness, righteousness, laws and judgments! Our redemption and salvation must then originate alone from his mercy and mind. And who could put his plans of salvation into operation to the full satisfaction of his own perfect holiness and righteousness in order to obtain a real heaven binding forgiveness and righteousness for us? Surely no one but God, the merciful and almighty himself. But this very act would necessitate him to become by incarnation a real man in order to take really our sins upon himself and fulfill our obligations to the fullest extent of the law and of righteousness, and not only to live but also to suffer and die for us. This is the only way left in which mercy could help and redeem us, and yet violate no attribute of God and no law. This real divine redemption alone can proclaim forgiveness and interfere with the judgment of the law, and can abrogate the punishments with all its attendants! But could we hope such a forgiveness without a divine act and realization by the atonement of God himself? And could we ever know anything of this divine important proceeding, without revelation? And is this unreasonable?

6. Without revelation we would know nothing of our renewal into the image of God nor the means by which such renewal is effected. If our sins are plotted out of God's memory and the books of judgment, it does not follow that they are plotted out at ready of man's conscience, since man's conscience is intimately connected with his life, heart and mind. Only by hearing of the fact of God's pardon and having understood this divine arrangement the redeeming grace and mercy of God are felt and if not resisted, kindle faith, and by faith man is brought to a full conscious possession of such salvation, and from henceforth the heavenly gifts are spread out before the soul, to transform him inwardly into the image of God which is holiness and righteousness. These divine operations in our mind and heart bring divine convictions and comforts, which last through life and death if not willfully resisted even to an eternal life. But this is not done without means. The means are and must be of God's own appointment containing his promises to man, which are his word and sacraments. But all this is carried on by a divine revelation and supernatural instruction, which shows the need of revelation. Is it unreasonable that man in his fallen state should be renewed?

7. Without revelation we know nothing of our future state or the immortality of the soul. In regard to the future state we know nothing except what our conscience will depict. The fear in us, in regard to the future, kindled by our sins, shows that something fearful is coming. This fear increases as we draw near our end, and is of itself evidence of a future state. The consciousness of ourselves, the moral law, our feeling of responsibility for our actions, our knowledge of an existing Supreme God as moral judge and even our anxiety, with which we concern ourselves about our soul and the future state proves the existence of such a state and the immortality of the soul. But what they really be, remains a mystery. Infidels cannot deny this. Their running into spiritual rapping circles proves this, but from that they cannot reasonably expect information, to be worthy of our respect and trust, in such an important matter. Not credulity and deceit but a direct information from God alone can place us on a safe footing. But this makes a revelation necessary and desirable. We see without revelation we would forever remain in darkness about the most important questions of life, and we are sure these three points above prove the necessity of revelation without contradiction.

American steel pens, though obliged to compete, as never before, with rival manufacturers in Europe, are still produced in enormous quantities, and the pen works in this country are probably the largest in the world. The method of manufacture is perfect and thorough, and is carried on by upward of one thousand trained artisans. A thin strip of sheet steel, of the proper width, is first prepared by rolling and annealing. In this state it is passed through a press, by which it is cut into pens. Two pens are cut out of the width of the steel, and with such nicety and precision that there is but little waste. The blanks are next taken to be pierced, and the little central hole, and the side slits, are cut by another press. These half made pens are next placed in an annealing oven to make them softer, after which they are marked, or stamped. They are then placed in another press, and are converted from a flat to a cylindrical form. They are then packed into iron boxes and heated to a white heat; when heated to a proper degree they are withdrawn and thrown into a large vessel of oil, where they acquire a brittleness that makes them almost crumble at the touch. The next process is cleaning, and then follows tempering, which restores the pens to the required elasticity. The operations of grinding and sitting completes the article. The pens are then assorted according to their qualities, and are ready for the market. The importations of steel pens amount to about $500 per week.

"Bob Brown, did you say that my father had not as much sense as Billy Smith's little yellow dog?" "No; I never said that your father had not as much sense as Billy Smith's little yellow dog." "All I said was that Billy Smith's little yellow dog had more sense than your father; that's all I ever said." "Well, it well you didn't say the other; I tell you."

der to take really our sins upon himself and fulfill our obligations to the fullest extent of the law and of righteousness, and not only to live but also to suffer and die for us. This is the only way left in which mercy could help and redeem us, and yet violate no attribute of God and no law. MONT CENIS TUNNEL FINISHED.

The greatest engineering work of the great century of engineering has at last been accomplished. The Mont Cenis Tunnel is perhaps a more wonderful triumph of genius and perseverance than the Atlantic Telegraph or the Suez Canal. Its length is seven miles and three fifths, it is twenty six feet and a quarter in width, and will carry a double line of rails from France, under the Alps, to Italy. The tunnel, which is now finished, has been cut by atmospheric machinery through the solid rock, schist, limestone and quartz, the air which moved the chisels escaping from its compression to supply the lungs of the workmen. The work has been fifteen years in progress, without reckoning the time spent in preliminary investigations it has been carried on continuously from 1857, until now. The railway up the Sion valley will now carry passengers straight through from Forneaux to Bardoneche, and it will be possible to go from Paris to Milan without climbing an Alpine pass, or even changing the railway carriage. So far as railway transit is concerned there are therefore no more Alps. The great mountain chain has been finally removed. This immense work has been carried out under vast difficulties. There could be no shafts as in the short tunnels which pierce our little English hills, and all the debris had to be carried to the entrance. It was begun at both ends, and the workmen who thus started, seven miles apart, with a mountain chain between them, have met as accurately as though there had been but a hill to pierce. As a triumph of engineering skill, we must mark this work as one of the new wonders of the world.

HEALTH AND HASTE.

It is not at all wholesome to be in a hurry. Locomotives have been reported to have moved a mile in a minute for a short distance; but locomotives have often come to grief by such rapidity. Multitudes in their haste to get rich are ruined every year. The men who do things maturely, slow, deliberately, are the men who often succeed in life. People who are habitually in a hurry, generally have to do things twice over. The tortoise beats the hare at last. Slow men never knock their brains out against a post. Foot races are injurious to health, as are all forms of competitive exercises; steady labor in the field is the best gymnasium in the world. Either labor or exercise carried to exhaustion or prostration or even to great excess, expressed by fagged out, always does more harm than previous exercise has done good. All running up stairs, running to catch up with a vehicle or cars, are extremely injurious to every age, sex, and condition of life. It ought to be the most pressing necessity which should induce a person over fifty to run twenty yards. Those live longest who are deliberate, whose actions are measured, who never embark in any enterprise with sleeping over it, and who perform all the every day acts of life with calmness. Quakers are proverbially calm, quiet people, and they are a thrifty folk, the world over.

Theodore Tilton has addressed a letter to the Chicago Journal, which was published last week, in which he gives his views of marriage and divorce. He gives the epitome of his creed as follows: "I believe in the love of one man and one woman; these twain, these only, and these to the uttermost. So long as this pair love each other, neither of the two is free to seek elsewhere another mate; to do so would, in my view, be treachery to human nature. I believe that this pure love between two conjugal breasts each finding hearts ease in the other, is the only moral and therefore the only possible justification of any union, whether of marriage or otherwise, by which these twain become one flesh. I believe a marriage covenant a contract, whose essential terms are to love, to honor and to cherish. It remains in force, according to my own specifications, just so long as the two parties continue to love, to honor and to cherish, and is ipso facto ended when instead of loving they hate, and instead of cherishing they despise, and instead of honoring they insult. I believe the civil law, in compelling either or both parties to such a contract, to abide together, is a compulsion for which I find no sanction in the Christian religion, and which is the greatest despotism in the legislation in the state or general law."

It is wonderful to what an extent people believe happiness depends on not being obliged to labor. Honest, hearty, contented labor is the only guarantee of life. The gloom of misanthropy is not only a great destroyer of happiness we might have, but it tends to destroy life itself. Idleness and luxury induce premature decay much faster than many trades, regarded as the most exhaustive and fatal to longevity. Labor in general, instead of shortening the term of life, actually increases it. It is the lack of occupation that annually destroys so many of the wealthy, who having nothing to do, play the part of drones, and like them, make a speedy exit, while the busy bee fills out its day in usefulness and honor.

It is a noble and great thing to cover the blemishes and to excuse the failings of a friend; to draw a curtain before his stains, and to display his perfection; to bury his weaknesses in silence, but to proclaim his virtues upon the housetop.

Trust not to him that seems a saint. Where no hope is left, is left no fear. An honest death is better than a dishonest life.
God only looks to pure, and not to full hands.
Hours are golden links—God's token reaching heaven.
Many delight more in giving presents than in paying their debts.
Our own heart and not other men's opinions, forms our true honor.
Pride, loss before unjust gain, for that brings grief but once, this forever.
Justice consists in doing no injury to men; decency, in giving them no offense.
It is a shameful thing to be weary of inquiry, when what we search for is excellent.
Joy descends gently upon us like the evening dew, and does not batter down like a hail storm.
Jealousy is cruel as the grave; the coals thereof are coals of fire, which hath a most vehement flame.
Every man's life lies within the present; for the past is spent and done with, and the future is uncertain.
True liberty consists in the privilege of enjoying our own rights—not in the destruction of the rights of others.
Though a taste of pleasure may quicken the relish of life, an unrestrained indulgence leads to inevitable destruction.
Those things that now seem frivolous and slight will be of serious consequence to you when they have made you once ridiculous.
The intellect is superior to the physical system. While the world lasts, the sun will gild the mountain tops before it shines upon the plain.
If you would be well with a great mind leave him with a favorable impression of you; if with a little mind leave him with a favorable opinion of himself.
There is perhaps no time at which we are disposed to think so highly of a friend as when we find him standing higher than we expected in the esteem of others.
A spirit of innovation is generally the result of a selfish temper and confined views. People will not look forward to posterity who never look backward to their ancestors.

Wendell Phillips is of the opinion that the fault in regard to railroad accidents does not lie with the managers or engineers or operators

LOCAL MATTERS.

A great crop of chestnuts is now being gathered as it is said the trees are unusually full of that delectable edible. Plenty of them are to be had at our groceries.

Bro. Mossberg, who has successfully conducted the Columbiana Register for nearly a year, retires from that position. During his administration he has made it a success. He is succeeded by two young gentlemen, Atterhalt & Nold, who start out encouragingly in the work they have undertaken. As they are admitted in the start of their valuable undertaking that it requires unceasing and wide awake work to fill the place of a successful editor.

By many people in this part of the country last Friday, especially during a portion of the afternoon, will be remembered as dark hours, seemingly inconsequence of the dense smoke which put out the sight of the sky. What theory can be made of use to satisfactorily explain this phenomenon better than the fact that immense fires have been raging in Michigan, Minnesota, Wisconsin and other states, including a portion of the north-west of Ohio, for many days, devastating large territories, and destroying all that is combustible in its way? The extremely dry weather and the great extent of these fires place them beyond human control. Millions of dollars worth of timber in the woods a great many houses and other property, and even human life have been sacrificed by this burning tornado.

All the necessary repairs have been made at the paper mill, since the disaster which occurred there some three weeks ago, caused by the bursting of a flue, which resulted in the death of the engineer, knocking down a portion of the chimney and doing other damage. They commenced making paper on last Monday. Devices have been added to the boiler which are said to insure safety in using it. This is a very important matter, as it adds to the security of property as well as safety of life.

THE NATION is the title of a new work of 500 pages, just published by J. R. Foster & Co., of Pittsburgh. It is a compilation of most useful and indispensable knowledge connected with our government, embracing the constitution, congress, all the departments, the cabinet, U. S. courts, congressmen, speakers of the house, congresses from 1790 to 1870, naturalization and neutrality laws, presidential elections, ambassadors, treaties, seal, internal revenue, public lands, county lands, national banks, and a great many other items of equal importance to those named. The discerning reader will see at a glance that this is a most practical work and thousands will add it to their libraries, as a contribution well worthy of public attention. Prof. D. H. Humer, of this place, is agent for this book, and has already secured the names of a considerable number of patrons especially among our business men. He is also agent for a work by Dr. Hall, "Fifty better than Phlegm—300 pages." No doubt it is better than a peek of pill, all the shirkers ought to read it.

Isn't queer that contractors should be employed to widen streets?

Monday and Tuesday of this week were what might be termed hot days. Weather reports from elsewhere reported heavy rains and before the Chicago fire ceased it began to fall heavily there. Yesterday the storm reached us, and in the afternoon we had high winds for a short time and threatened rain.

Mr. Loew, the clothing merchant across the canal snarks for himself in his puzzling advertisement in to-day's paper. Who can make it out?

A band of Gypsies have squatted in the timber a little west of town. Some half a dozen of them are there—the men are ready to trade horses and the women to tell fortunes.

As may be seen by his notice in to-day's paper, Mr. John Hoskin, one of our most estimable citizens, offers for sale his beautifully arranged residence, located on Main street in this city. In referring to this property the proprietor in a very general way describes its advantages, but to realize this tastefully and substantially furnished home it must be seen and examined to be fully appreciated. Whoever is the fortunate purchaser will have a place to be envied, for there is everything about it that can contribute to the health, convenience and elegance of the premises. It will not be long in the market.

The Orrville fair begins to-day, and will continue till Friday. Our neighbors there generally get up big exhibitions, and this will be no exception. We are informed that Mr. T. H. Stansbury, the marble worker at Fulton, will be there and exhibit some of the ingenious specimens of his superior skill and workmanship. It is also said that he has been finishing or has in progress of completion some half dozen large orders—$500 and $600 orders—from north, south, east and west, and has full employment for half dozen men to aid him in filling the contracts he has on hand. That means business, and Mr. S. feels much encouraged in his enterprise.

Quite a crowd of our citizens were much interested on last Saturday in examining the newly invented sander, devised by Wm. Pinn, to which reference was made last week. He has succeeded in so improving this simple piece of mechanism that all admire it, who have seen his plain model. Mr. P. has applied for a patent. After being loaded with loose earth by a simple lever the scraper is raised on two wheels, which makes the work much easier for the team, and the contents carried to any place desired, where they are dumped off ready for another load.

In a quotation from Homer's Iliad, first column, line 10, in last No. for information of our readers, some error had crept in. The line below for contribute read contribute. Eighth line from bottom same column leave out the word or between existence and from. Second column in a quotation from Laplace, insert the word of between are and the in the last line out end of the paragraph.

The experiment of the publisher in issuing the People's Monthly, at Pittsburgh, is proving a gratifying success. As an illustrated paper it is creditable in every respect, and bids fair to rival some of the well known periodicals of that class. In addition to the great amount of literary and scientific reading matter the illustrations in the October number are a feature well calculated to commend the work to all persons of good taste.

By their new posters it will be seen that S. Koch & Co. have been adding an immense stock of everything in the way of clothing to their fine store in the Opera building. The taste and judgment of the young gentlemen who have charge of this well known establishment gives assurance that they anticipate the wants of their customers, and have everything that is required to make up a complete outfit for a gentleman, and lots of nice trunks in which to keep their garments.

Our Odd Fellow brethren have just had placed at their lodge entrance, corner of Main and Erie streets, a handsomely carved gas light, a very creditable piece of workmanship, the principal part of which was executed by Mr. J. A. Abrahamson, the successful sign painter. It is creditable to the taste of the brotherhood, and indicates that the institution is prospering.

That big lot of new boxes in front of Dielheim's clothing store indicates that they have well filled shelves and drawers of the latest importation of clothing in all its possible varieties. In making selections of goods the care and caution of Mr. H. Dielheim are guarantees that he would not choose anything but what will prove satisfactory to his customers, either in style or quality. Then clothing is made to order at that establishment, so if their patrons want a full rig, or but a part there is a good place to go for it.

We call attention to the card of the St. Louis Medicine Co., a chartered institution; they offer metropolitan skill to all.

The newly drilled portion of Mill street with a good coat of cinders from the furnaces would make it very uncomfortable traveling there barefoot. It would be doing penance which should bring repentance to the most hardened sinner.

THE AMERICAN WASHER!

PRICE, $5.50.

The American Washer saves Money, Time, and Drudgery.

The Fatigue of Washing Day no longer dreaded, but Economy, Efficiency, and Clean Clothing sure.

In calling public attention to this little machine, a few of the invaluable qualities (not possessed by any other washing machine yet invented) are here enumerated.

It is the smallest, most compact, most portable, most simple in construction, most easily operated. A child ten years old, with a few hours practice, can thoroughly clean a washing no service to anxiety, no delay in adapting it to new work! It is a miniature giant, doing in a few minutes what a better quality, than the most elaborate and costly. One half of the labor is fully saved by its use, and the old plan of the tub and wringer. It will wash, wring, and dry. Three shirts at a very frequency and extent of female diseases in our country, is good evidence that the common treatment has not met with success, and shows that some more efficient course should be adopted.

We were long since convinced that local remedies and external appliances, bandages, &c., were mere palliatives for the time, and of no permanent value whatever, but that the only real cure was to be found in the use of the American Washer.

For the benefit of those who may be afflicted with a disease peculiar to the sex, whether from a slight chill, followed by a derangement and irregularity of the general system, which many times produces cough, expectoration, tightness of the chest, difficulty of breathing, palpitation, &c., and from symptoms of many other causes which produce such terrible suffering among women, as to make life a burden to them, we would say that our remedies are selected and prepared with special view towards these conditions, and with a special view towards the cure of the disease, and with a special view towards the cure of the disease, and with a special view towards the cure of the disease.

We have cured hundreds—yes, thousands of cases by medical treatment alone, hundreds of whom we have never seen, and who sent us their cases for examination. Our success in these cases is mild, but educational, and are such as we have found out to act in conformity with the laws of nature in regulating health; and from the success which has almost invariably crowned our efforts in these cases, we can promise to do and promise to cure, and we can promise to do and promise to cure, and we can promise to do and promise to cure.

Send us a trial of morning urine by express and we can send you the necessary medicine.

WHAT THE MICROSCOPE REVEALS.—Lewerick tells us of an insect seen with the microscope, of which twenty-seven millions would only equal a mite. Insects of various kinds may be seen in the cavity of a grain of sand. Mould is a forest of beautiful trees, with branches, leaves and fruit. Butterflies are fully feathered. Hairs are hollow tubes. The surface of our bodies is covered with scales, and yet a scale covers five hundred pores. Through these narrow openings the sweat forces itself like water through a sieve. Each drop of stagnant water contains a world of animated beings, swimming with as much liberty as whales in the sea. Each leaf has a colony of insects grazing on it, like cows in a meadow.

Why is the world like a pinna? Because it is full of sharps and flats. A druggist is not inappropriately termed the chief pillar of society. Dogs are represented to be the most skillful dentists. They insert natural teeth. Clara asked Tom: 'What animal dropped from the clouds?' The rain, dear, was the reply. A minister at an eating house gave the order, 'Roast beef, well done, then good and faithful servant.'

A Boston paper, writing of a recent address there, says: 'The discourse was an hour in length, and was listened to with ability.' If a man throws a huge stone at his wife's head, would he escape punishment on the plea that he only meant to rock her to sleep? Burrows was the most absent minded of men. It is said of him that he was found standing by the fire one day with an egg in his hand and his watch in the saucupan.

Kissing a pretty girl down South, a fellow asked her what made her so sweet? 'Oh,' she replied, 'My father was a sugar planter.'

'A man who'd maliciously set fire to a barn,' said good old Elder Jones, 'and burn up a stable full of horses and cows, ought to be kicked to death by a jackass; and I'd like to be the one to do it.'

A gentleman was examining an umbrella, and commented upon its fine quality. 'Yes,' said a person present, 'he fancies everything he sees.' 'And,' added a third party, 'he is inclined to seize everything he fancies.'

'Paddy, my boy,' said a gentleman to an Irishman, whom he observed fishing away at a favorite pool, 'that must be a fine stream for trout.' 'Faith and sure it must be the same, for I've been standing here this three hours, and not one of them will come out of it.'

Two Irishmen were one day engaged in roofing a house, when one lost his hold and fell to the ground. The other hastened to him and inquired, when he found him lying prostrate and still: 'Mickey! Mickey! are you dead?' 'No,' replied Mickey, 'not dead, but speechless!'

Elder Knapp, the great revivalist, was actively engaged in a revival of religion down in Arkansas, and when about to baptize a new convert he called out in a loud voice: 'Does any one know any reason why this man should not be baptized?' and to his surprise a long specimen of an Arkansas traveler appeared in response: 'See here, Mister preacher, I don't want to interfere in that 'ere business of yours, but if you expect to get all the sin out of that old cuss, you will have to an chor him out in the river over night.'

An attorney at law, who wished to show his smartness by quizzing an old farmer, by asking him there were many girls in his neighborhood. 'Yes,' replied the old man, 'there's a dreadful sight of 'em—so many that there ain't half enough respectable husbands for 'em all, and o'some of 'em are beginning to take up with lawyers.' The attorney didn't follow up the subject. A man who was not very careful in personal appearance tells this story of himself: 'I went to a drug store early one morning for a dose of morphine for a sick friend. The night clerk objected to giving it to me without a prescription, evidently fearing I meant to destroy myself. "Pshaw," said I, "do I look like a man who would kill himself?" Gazing at me steadily for half a minute, he replied: "I don't know. Seems to me, if I looked like you, I should be greatly tempted to kill myself."

Dr. J. LONG,
Eclectic Physician,
Has located himself at Massillon, O., for the treatment of Female & Chronic Diseases.
Office east of the Park, second door of Mr. Folke's new building.
All consultations and examinations of patients made free of charge.
Dr. Long examines and explains your disease without asking any questions. If he understands your case you know it, and cannot be deceived. If he cannot tell your disease, and how you feel without asking questions, he does not consider himself competent to treat your case. This is the criterion to go by, and patients should not be satisfied with any other. This is the only direct and positive evidence of my ability as a scientific physician, and by this standard I am willing to be judged.
A proper diagnosis of local disease, without constitutional symptoms, that is, not affecting the system generally, must depend upon the judgment of both patient and physician.
Give Dr. Long a call, and satisfy yourselves whether he understands your cases sufficiently well to treat them successfully. Dr. Long may be consulted in the German and English languages. Address letters, JAMES LONG, M. D., Massillon, Ohio.
MONEY CANNOT BUY IT! For Sight is Priceless.
THE DIAMOND SPECTACLES WILL PRESERVE IT.

The Diamond Glasses,
Manufactured by
J. E. Spencer & Co., N. Y.,
Which are now offered to the public, are pronounced by all the celebrated Opticians of the world to be the Most Perfect, Natural, Artificial help to the human eye ever known.
They are ground under their own supervision, from minute Crystal Pebbles, melted together, and derive their name, "Diamond," on account of their hardness and brilliancy.
THE SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLE on which they are constructed brings the core of the eye to the lens directly in front of the eye, producing a clear and distinct vision, as in the natural, healthy sight, and preventing all unpleasant sensations, such as glimmering and wavering of sight, dizziness, &c., peculiar to all others in use.
They are mounted in the Finest Manner in frames of the best quality, of all materials used for that purpose.
Their Finish and Durability cannot be surpassed.
CAUTION.—None genuine unless bearing their trade mark — stamped on every frame — of JOSEPH COLEMAN.
Jeweler and Optician, sole agent for Massillon, Ohio.
From whom they can only be obtained. These goods are not supplied to peddlars at any price. 378-ly

TIME.

Manhood; how Lost, how Restored.
Just published, a new edition of Dr. CULVERWELL'S Celebrated Essay on the radical cure, without medicine, of Seminal Losses, Impotency, Mental and Physical Incapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc.; also, Consumption, Epilepsy and Fits, induced by self-indulgence or sexual extravagance.
Price in a sealed envelope only six cents. The celebrated author, in this admirable essay, clearly demonstrates that the alarming consequences of self-abuse may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the application of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain, and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.
This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land. Sent under seal, in a plain envelope, to any address, postpaid on receipt of six cents or two post stamps.
Also, Dr. Culverwell's "Marriage Guide," price 25 cents.
